Lamb of God

By Paul Turner

At first glance, lambs and bread have less in common than buffaloes and wings. Yet when the liturgy describes “The Breaking of the Bread”, it calls for the singing of the “Lamb of God.” John the Baptist first used the expression when he pointed out Jesus to some of his own disciples (Jn 1:29). John recognizes Jesus as the lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. He draws the image from other passages of Scripture. On the night the devastating angel delivered ancient Israel from the hands of the enemy, God’s faithful people sacrificed a lamb and sprinkled its blood on their doorposts (Ex 12:3,7). Many generations later, when Israel found itself in bondage again, Isaiah compared God’s suffering servant to a lamb that is led to the slaughter (Is 53:7). After the resurrection, the Book of Revelation records a vision of a lamb standing, paradoxically, as if it had been slaughtered (Rv 5:6).

John the Baptist saw Jesus as the sacrifice, the risen one, the deliverer. We recall this image of Christ, the lamb of God, just before communion. Breaking bread and pouring wine are moments of sacrifice in our Mass. In these reverent actions, Christ, the sacrificial victim, is broken and poured out. “Lamb” and “bread” go together because the bread and the wine have become Christ, the lamb, who was sacrificed, and whose saving mystery we celebrate at Mass.

The breaking and pouring serve other purposes as well: They underscore the unity that we share in this communion. We will become one by sharing of the one bread and one cup. They also serve a functional role, dividing the sacrifice so many may partake.

When we use individual hosts for bread, we lose some of this symbolism, because the bread has essentially been broken prior to the Mass. One reason the priest breaks a large host in such circumstances is to share the pieces with some in the community to preserve the symbolic unity of the sacrifice.

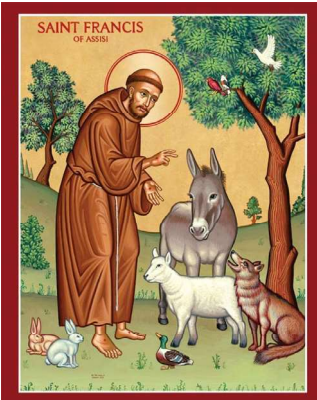

Still, the Lamb of God rings out in our churches to alert the faithful that the breaking of the bread calls us to follow Christ by our communion, through sacrifice and into glory.

Little Francis Love Notes:

Inspired by the life and spirituality of St. Francis of Assisi who lived over 800 years ago and always took the time and made the effort to see Jesus in everyone and everything, take a moment to reflect on this note:

Note: Unless we are happy with who we are, we'll never be happy with what we have.

Reflection: I will celebrate that which I like most about myself.
